

Solar Accomplishments

Solar Publishing accomplished a lot in our first two years. Our commitment to youth inspired us to share our titles with children at the Gary Comer Youth Center in Chicago, the Ben Carson Scholars Reading Program in Baltimore and others. As exhibitors at various events we not only presented our products, we also engaged children and parents with readings, music and dance. Our overall success can truly be measured by:

The number of children who listened intently and laughed while we shared our stories with them.

The number of children who learned of the country Belize and tasted mangos for the first time.

The people we've met and shared with at our events. The parents we've met who tell us our books are their children's favorites.

The non-profits who have invited us to share our stories and smiles with their constituents.

Carson Scholars – Ben Carson Reading Day

Turning the Page, Washington, DC

The people who learned about Maasai culture during a Solar Publishing fundraiser and donated money for wells to lessen the impact Global Warming is having on a village in Maasai Mara, Kenya.

The number of children who learned about Global Warming, why trees are important and who now hug trees, step over bugs, and say good morning to the sun.
